Anticancer Effects of the Drug Combination of Parvovirus H-1 with Chemotherapy and Its Effect on Cervical Cancer Cells. Recently, the combination therapy of virus-mediated gene therapy and chemotherapeutic agents has been attracting increasing attention. In the present study, the anticancer effects of the combination of parvovirus H-1 (H-1PV) with cisplatin (CDDP) and docetaxel (DTX) on cervical cancer cells were examined. For the treatment of H-1PV, the cells were infected with H-1PV and then analyzed by RT-PCR and Western blot. The anticancer activity was evaluated by MTS assay and flow cytometric analysis. Our results showed that H-1PV had a higher anticancer activity than the single agent. The combination of H-1PV with CDDP and DTX exerted a synergistic effect in HeLa cells. These results suggest that combination therapy using parvovirus H-1 and anticancer agents may be an effective strategy for the treatment of cervical cancer.Q: Wrapping rails helpers in a.js file?
